NEWS RELEASE

Southwest Airlines® Adds Eight New Nonstop Cities, Including Its First-Ever International Service, from Silicon Valley's Airport

-- Southwest's Major Expansion of Service at SJC Includes New Nonstops to Cabo San Lucas, Orlando, New Orleans, Houston-Hobby, Albuquerque, St. Louis, Spokane and Boise --

San José, Calif. – Summer travel is coming to a close at Mineta San José International Airport (SJC), but things are just beginning to heat up with Southwest Airlines' announcement today of eight new nonstop cities for Silicon Valley business and leisure travelers to begin as early as March 8, 2018. For fares and bookings, visit Southwest.com.

Southwest's Vice President Controller Leah Koontz addressed the media at the airline's ticket counter in Terminal B to announce the carrier's first-ever international service from San José to Mexico via Cabo San Lucas. Also of significance, Southwest announced first-ever nonstop service from San José to Orlando, New Orleans, Houston-Hobby and Albuquerque, along with new service to St. Louis, Spokane and Boise. She also shared travel advisories and updates for Southwest customers given the impacts caused by Hurricane Harvey in the state of Texas.

Together, Koontz announced the addition of 80 weekly flights from SJC beginning in spring 2018, including added frequency to the airline's existing cities of Chicago-Midway, Dallas-Love Field, Phoenix, Portland-Oregon and Seattle.

"Southwest has been investing in San José for nearly 25 years, connecting our Customers to what is important in their lives with more nonstop options to where they want to go," said Koontz, who is also Southwest's Executive Leader over California. "This growth in San José is incredibly exciting as we expand our reach to even more cities across the United States, as well as into Mexico with the addition of Cabo San Lucas. Our Employees in the Golden State are the gold standard of Hospitality and are what truly sets us apart from the rest."
